Diablo

Nested between Danville and Blackhawk, Diablo sits at the base of Mount Diablo for which it is named.

Diablo, less than 2 square miles, was established in the early 1900s as a summer vacation spot for wealthy San Francisco residents who wanted to escape the fog. In 1912 Robert Noble Burgess purchased Oakwood Stock Farm and transformed it into a summer resort—the Mount Diablo Park Club. Burgess was a visionary and an entrepreneur and within a couple of years he had brought a power line from Danville, finished a new road (Mt. Diablo Scenic) to the summit of Mount Diablo, established a post office and started building private homes. It was not long before Diablo had become a hot-spot for upper-class tourists. The San Francisco and Oakland society pages often featured articles about the parties and dances held at the Mt. Diablo Park Club. Burgess sold his Diablo house in 1919 but the club lived on.

In 1920 the club had 400 members and changed names to Mount Diablo Country Club. A map of the San Ramon Valley showed the country club area to be larger than downtown Danville and many were the townsfolk that earned their living as caddies, gardeners, cooks or groundskeepers at the club.

When World War II raged in Europe the country clubs golf courses went to seed, the Chalet was occupied by female telephone operators and Navy officers rented Diablo homes. This was the start of year-round living at the club.

In 1948 Larry Cortola bought the club, now named Diablo Country Club, and once again the club went under a major make over. A new clubhouse was built, the Red Horse and Oakwood training barns were razed and the post office was relocated. The club prospered as new homes were built and the community came to life.

During the 1960s the infrastructure was modernized as the Freeway from Walnut Creek to Danville opened, East Bay MUD took over the responsibility of providing Diablo with water and the Central Sanitary District built pipes into Danville and out Diablo Road to serve the club.

Today the Diablo community is occupied by nearly 1000 people living at the foot of beautiful Mount Diablo. Although Diablo is no longer the only country club in the valley, it has a uniqueness and a history unrivaled among communities in the East Bay.

Eugene Gladstone O'Neill, the only Nobel Prize winning playwright from the United States and the architect of modern American theater, lived at Tao House in the hills above Danville from 1937 to 1944. It was at this site that he wrote his final and most successful plays; "The Iceman Cometh," "Long Days Journey Into Night," and "A Moon For the Misbegotten."
