CHICAGO TITLE
Among the richest counties in ethnic diversity nationally, San Mateo County offers residents a rich mix of urban development, sleepy redwood forests and one of the best-preserved coastlines in America.

In addition to wineries, flower farms, fishing, internationally known computers firms and the world’s eighth busiest airport, San Mateo County’s residents are among the wealthiest and best educated in the world.

The County is 45 miles long and as narrow as 7 miles in some places. Most of its 700,000 residents live along the San Francisco Bay, with the remainder closer to the coast. An estimated 90 percent live on 20 percent of the land, making San Mateo County the fifth highest in population density in the state.

Still, more than 74 percent of the land is open space, giving the County a rural, almost isolated feel in parts. Of its 553 square miles, 105 are covered by water.

The breath taking views and beautiful scenery coupled with a mild climate makes San Mateo County among the country most desirable places to live.

Atherton, home to corporate executives and celebrities, is a quiet town with historic and new mansions hidden down private lanes. The town has no commercial area, but residents gather at the public Holbrook-Palmer Park and the private Menlo Circus Club. The Town takes great pride in its trees – honoring well-maintained trees and asking residents to preserve the larger, native ones.

The town incorporated in 1923 and was named after Faxon Atherton and his daughter-in-law, writer Gertrude Atherton. Faxon Atherton’s home, Valparaiso, was built in the 1860’s on 500 acres at what is now El Camino Real and Atherton Avenue. Valparaiso was among the first of the great estates in San Mateo County, but like many of the other estates, the property was later subdivided.

Beautiful foliage, elegant gardens and heritage dominate this small quiet community.

Belmont this mid-sized city sits on the middle of the peninsula, equidistant between San Francisco and San Jose. It was once part of Rancho de las Pulgas, a Spanish land grant by King Charles III to Don Jose Arguello, an office with the expedition led by Father Junipero Serra in 1776. The city incorporated in 1926.

The Western part of town is quiet and serene, with large houses dotting the rolling hills. In the East, the city has attracted some major businesses to the Island Park area.

Belmont prides itself on maintaining open spaces, and the city’s centerpiece is Twin Pines Park, site of the historical society museum, the Senior an Community Center and free afternoon concerts each Sunday in the summer.

Brisbane boasts a colorful past, a promising future and enough local politics for two towns its size. Nestled at the foot of San Bruno Mountain’s north slope, Brisbane still retains a sense of the Old West in spite of a modern marina and office park on the Bayfront and a major industrial park just to the north. The city in the county’s northeast corner has changed since being incorporated in 1961. It doubled its tax revenues from 1982 to 1983 by annexing the Crocker Industrial Park and the Northeast Ridge of San Bruno Mountain.

Burlingame, the city of trees, boasts charming old-style neighborhoods all within an easy drive of San Francisco, Silicon Valley and San Francisco International Airport. Young professionals with families have moved in to join long-time residents, making the city one of the most desirable communities in San Mateo County.

The Eastern part of the city boasts one of San Mateo County’s most vibrant downtowns, from Burlingame Avenues trendy, upscale shops and cafes to Broadway’s village-like charm. Burlingame also prides itself on excellent schools and the long, loved column of eucalyptus and elm presiding over El Camino Real.

Colma, known around the world as the “cemetery town” is the smallest city in San Mateo County with about 1,100 residents—and 1.5 million souls. Former San Francisco Mayor George Mascone, buried in Holy Cross Cemetery, and lawman Wyatt Earp, in Hills of Eternity Jewish Cemetery, are among the town’s better-known “residents.”

But Colma is more than just a collection of 16 cemeteries. Within its 2.2-mile boundaries, Colma offers two shopping centers, one of Northern California’s most complete collection of car dealerships and a BART station.

Daly City has welcomed visitors since John D. Daly opened his Top of the Hill ranch to refugees fleeing the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire. Incorporated in 1911, the city had fewer than 3,000 residents, many of whom worked on cabbage farms and hog ranches—but the city experienced a renaissance in World War II.

Just South of San Francisco, Daly City has become the most populous cities in San Mateo County. It has recently been recognized as an immigrant’s town and hosts a diverse population that includes the region’s largest Filipino community.

East Palo Alto is possibly the next boomtown for the county. Crime is down and the home prices are rising. It is protected of breezes by hills, and close to Dumbarton Bridge, Highway 101 and Silicon Valley.

Foster City has grown from a muddy island populated mainly by cows to a metropolis of high-rises, winding waterways and industrial parks in just over 25 years.

The city’s founding father is T. Jack Foster, who transformed Brewer Island, a nugget of Bayside land used as a dairy farm, into one of the country’s most successful planned communities.

The city seems to stand apart from the rest of the County, with its stately bridges, unique architecture, and carefully placed parks and lagoons that wind throughout the city.

The city is divided into nine distinct neighborhoods, and most them have their own park and shopping center within walking distance.

Half Moon Bay, in the heart of the San Mateo County Coastside, is a unique blend of small town charm and natural beaches. Visitors flock to town on weekends to visit the spectacular shoreline for surfing, bathing and hiking, while residents enjoy a largely rural community.

Up to 300,000 visitors attend the Half Moon Bay Art and Pumpkin Festival each fall.

In addition to a growing number of commuters who now call Half Moon Bay home, the city has long been an agricultural hub for the County, producing much of its fava beans, peas, leeks and artichokes, among other crops. The mainstays of agriculture are the vast flower fields and greenhouses that line the Coast.

Hillsborough, a town of million dollar mansions, prides itself on its lovely winding roads, rural atmosphere and excellent public schools.

The six-square mile town has no commercial area, no apartment buildings, and no stoplights. Hillsborough was incorporated in 1910 to prevent its large country estates from being annexed to neighboring cities.

The biggest community event of the year is the Concours d’Elegance, a display of prestigious and antique autos benefiting the Hillsborough public schools.

Menlo Park is a haven to more and more high-tech companies such as Sun Microsystems, yet it still retains its reputation as a pleasing and picturesque place to live. A pleasant upscale town bordering desirable Atherton, Palo Alto, and Stanford University.

The downtown shopping district is a great source of community pride with its sidewalk benches, cleverly decorated storefronts and bustling streetscape.

The town’s roots go back to the days when the only way to travel was by horse. The town was named in the 1850s by two Irishmen who called their 1,700-acre spread Menlo Park after Menlough, County Galway.

Millbrae, located immediately west and above San Francisco airport, calls itself “Our place in the Sun.” The hills of Millbrae keep the town free of fog. Residential homes range from sitting on the hills with breathtaking views, to lying in the flatlands in quaint neighborhoods.

Downtown Millbrae has recently been upgraded. Millbrae has great transportation access and has a new grand BART station.

Montara/Moss Beach Two small cities side by side in an unincorporated area, just North of Half Moon Bay and governed by the San Mateo Board of Supervisors. This area has a pretty, rustic and artsy look.

On the rugged California coast, just 25 miles south of San Francisco, sits the Point Montara Fog Signal and Light Station. Established in 1875, the historic lighthouse and turn-of-the-century buildings have been preserved and restored by Hostelling International - American Youth Hostels and California State Parks, in cooperation with the U.S. Coast Guard.

Pacifica, on San Mateo County’s north coast, is home to some of the area’s best fishing and surfing beaches.

A bedroom community that maintains a largely undeveloped commercial element, Pacifica is home for many families who lived there for generations. While 50 percent of Pacifica is dedicated open space, only 10 percent of the town available for future development.

With dramatic visits from the hillside areas as well as neighborhoods snuggled up to the coastline, the city’s striking shoreline is only secondary in fame to its awesome displays of fog. The city’s annual Fog Fest is held each September.

Portola Valley

Portola Valley is a rural community with some of the most exclusive homes on the Peninsula. With its wooded setting, meandering horse trails and private tennis courts, Portola Valley is an enclave for Silicon Valley executives and professors from nearby Stanford University.

The town began as a lumber industry community in the 1850s and finally incorporated in 1964 to protect itself from increasing development. Originally known as Searsville, the valley became a farming community when the logging industry slowed.

After Woodside incorporated in 1956, Portola Valley debated following suit to protect itself from the expanding post-World War II development in the Peninsula’s eastern urban centers.

Redwood City, the oldest municipality in San Mateo County, is the county seat. This historic city has such landmarks as the old domed courthouse, Union Cemetery, the Fox Theater, the Lathrop House and the old main fire station that has been converted into a nationally recognized library.

The county seat also has many new building projects including the police station, the Sequoia Station shopping center and the Redwood Shores residential and commercial neighborhood east of the Bayshore Freeway.

San Bruno, incorporated in 1914 has figured prominently in the movement of people and goods on the Peninsula. The city has grown to more than six square miles and 14,000 households since its humble start at a country crossroads.

Many homes in this city share beautiful views of the San Francisco Bay while others are nestled in flat land neighborhoods.

While a transit hub, the city also seems to be a focus of federal activity. San Bruno holds the Golden Gate national Cemetery, the U.S. Postal Service’s western regional headquarters, the Federal Archives and Records Center. The city is also home to San Francisco International Airport.

San Carlos, the “city of good living,” strikes a fine balance between the picturesque neighborhoods of its residential areas and the industrial area East of the railroad tracks.

According to city lore, the town got its name from one of three sources: the San Carlos, the first ship to sail into San Francisco Bay, or King Charles III of Spain, or the Portola Expedition that discovered the Bay on the Feast of St. Charles, Nov. 4, 1769.

With its quaint downtown, active youth sports programs and plentiful senior services, the city maintains its hometown feel.

Laurel Avenue has evolved into one of the more popular areas in the County, with merchants clamoring for space among busy boutiques.

San Mateo is the second most populous city in the county and is home to leading businesses in the high-technology field. It traces its history back to when Native Americans called it home. The first party of European explorers arrived on the Peninsula in 1776.

It is located in the center of the county, served by a rail line and two major freeways. The San Mateo Bridge links the Peninsula with the East Bay and San Francisco International Airport is just five miles to the north.

The downtown area has many historic buildings and a number of popular restaurants. Hillsdale Shopping Center draws customers from throughout the region and there are a number of neighborhood centers as well.

South San Francisco was named by meat packer Gustavus Swift who liked to attach the names of larger cities to the areas around his cattle processing centers. While Swift and the other meat packers are gone, the city has a growing commercial and industrial area, and is home to a number of biotechnology firms. Genetech Inc., one of the first of the biotech companies, has a sprawling compound on the waterfront.

There are two marinas at Oyster Point and the city is home to the California Gold Club. The South San Francisco Unified School District serves more than 10,000 students and has an early childhood development center and an adult school.

San Bruno Mountain rises above the city, with the landmark motto “San Francisco the Industrial City” emblazoned on its eastern flank.

Woodside, a rural home to many lavish estates and 2,000 horses, is criss-crossed with bridle baths throughout its unique, park-like setting.

Woodside’s first lumber mill was constructed in 1839, and by the time California became a state in 1850, the town was a main supplier of lumber to San Francisco. In 1853, Dr. Robert O. Tripp, a local dentist, grocer and baker, coined the name Woodside for 127 acres of woods surrounding his Woodside Store. He never thought it would become the town name.

The town has encouraged the development of equestrian trails. A relatively small commercial area serves some of the needs of the residents. There is no chamber of commerce and law enforcement is handled by the County Sherrif’s Office.

COMMUTING STRATEGIES

- Change routes. If the Bay Bridge becomes unbearable, try BART or drive the San Mateo Bridge.
- Switch Freeways. Instead of I-880, try I-580. For San Jose, use I-680, possibly extra miles but shorter time.
- Buy a Thomas Bros. Map and keep it in your car. A great source for finding alternate routes.
- Listen to the traffic reports on the radio.
- Buy bridge ticket books and save BART tickets in advance. Saves times and money. Available at local grocery stores.
- Join a car pool. Take advantage of the diamond carpool lanes.
- Avoid peak rush hours. Leave by 6:30 a.m. and 4:00 p.m.
- Take BART whenever possible.

HARBORS & MARINAS

Port of Redwood City
675 Seaport Blvd., Redwood City
(650) 306-4150

The port of Redwood City is the only deep-water cargo port serving ocean-going vessels in San Mateo County. It also has a 220-slip marina. The port has served as headquarters for Kaiser Cement and Cargill Salt and was a home base for the Glomar Explorer.

Port income comes from maritime activities, marinas, restaurants and other businesses. It is not only self-supporting, it produces revenue for the city. The port has a 30-foot-deep channel, a turning basin large enough for cargo vessels and docking facilities.

San Mateo County Harbor District
726-4723

The Harbor District operates two public harbors:

Pillar Point Harbor, El Grandada
(650) 726-5727

A commercial port serving sport an commercial fishermen and other ocean-going activities such as recreational boaters

Oyster Point Marina, South San Francisco

Allied Arts Guild and Tearoom
75 Arbor Road, Menlo Park
Lunch Resv. (650) 324-2588 / Information (650) 322-2405
A showplace for artisans, this is a tranquil setting for a three-course lunch which is prepared by volunteers with proceeds going to charity. Designed after the famous Alhambra and Giralde gardens of Granada, Spain, the Allied Arts Guild gardens feature roses, citrus, ponds and fountains, and ever-changing display beds of annuals and perennials growing in charming patios and courtyards reminiscent of those in Spain. The Guild is operated to raise funds for Children’s Hospital at Stanford University.

Japanese Tea Garden
San Mateo Central Park, East Fifth Ave and El Camino Real
(650) 377-4640
The one-acre site was designed by Nagao Sakurai, former landscape architect at the Imperial Palace in Tokyo, and features a tea house, waterfalls, a pagoda, and pathways through harmoniously arranged trees and rocks. The garden provides a quiet retreat from everyday living.
